

The State Bar of California Committee on Women in the Law and Santa Clara University Center for Social Justice & Public Service

Present

Do You Want to Teach Law?

Saturday, April 16, 2005

10 a.m. – 3:00 p.m. (9:30 registration and coffee)

Santa Clara University School of Law, 142 Bannan Hall
500 El Camino Real, Santa Clara, California 95053

Many lawyers and law students are interested in teaching law, yet law school faculties are not always as diverse as might be expected given the number of women and minorities in the profession. This program seeks to de-mystify the process and possibilities, provide a realistic view of the demands and benefits of various academic positions, and give nuts-and-bolts instruction for those interested in pursuing this career path.

Three consecutive panels include:

- What to Expect Teaching at a Law School? Get the scoop on requirements, duties, salary, hours, research and writing expectations, and more from tenure track professors, administrators, deans, adjunct and clinical professors, and legal writing instructors.
- Elimination of Bias and Increasing Diversity: [1 hour of approved Elimination of Bias Credit] Learn about current statistics highlighting bias, recent trends, and strategies for eliminating bias and improving the diversity of women and minority attorney applicants for law school teaching positions.
- How to Get There? Professionals who have served on law school hiring committees and those who have recently been hired will share inside information on successful resume building, real hiring procedures, the value of an LLM, the national hiring conference for tenured positions, alternative paths to tenure track positions and more!
